CONGRESSIONAL.

HOUSE

WASHINGTON, May 16. After reading the journal of yesterday, Mr. Potter moved and demanded the regular order of business, which was on suspending the rules and for the previous question on the resolution for the adjournment on "fraud." On standing vote that was but eighty-nine in the affirmative and seven to the negative, when, as is usual, objection was made, Mr. Hale, end tellers were ordered. Mr. Potter and Hale acting in that capacity. The report of the tellers was eighty-nine in the affirmative, and two, Hale and Steele in the negative.

Mr. Potter then moved a call of the house. Mr. Page moved in order to move to postpone this matter indefinitely so that the house may be in session to the 1st of June.

Mr. Page (severely). In the gentleman's first vote to help to make up a quorum, that the motion can be made.

Mr. Page (angrily). That was not the question I had.

Calls for regular order from the democratic side.

Mr. Conger. I rise to a previous question.

Mr. Conger. Parliamentary inquiry is always in order.

The speaker. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. Conger. I ask whether it is in order at this time to raise the question of confidence in the speaker.

Mr. Saylor. The gentleman certainly knows that when no quorum is voting there are but two motions in order, and one of them has just been made.

Mr. Conger. I addressed myself to the chair and to the distinguished gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. Conger. I addressed myself to the speaker, and also to the distinguished gentleman from Michigan.

[Calls of a (eg.)]

The call of the roll was proceeded with, and 247 members answered to their names, there being but 45 absent. Even Mr. Stephens, who got leave of absence for a week on Monday last, was present in his wheeled chair.

Further proceedings under the call being dispensed with, Mr. Scott moved to Mr. Potter that the regular order be set aside, and that the house proceed to the consideration of the pension bill.

Mr. Potter. We are prepared to go on with public business, and we are here for that purpose, but are left without quorum by wilful absence of gentlemen on the other side, and I demand the regular order. Question recurred on seconding the demand for the previous question, and on this vote the democrats developed their greatest strength. The report of the tellers being 133 in the affirmative and 1 in the negative. Usual cry of no quorum, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Conger. I addressed myself to the chair and to the distinguished gentleman from Michigan.

Further proceedings under the call being dispensed with, Mr. Scott moved to Mr. Potter that the regular order be set aside, and that the house proceed to the consideration of the pension bill.

Mr. Potter. I call the attention of the gentleman from Michigan to the fact that there were 263 members present and 29 absentees.

The question again recurred on seconding the demand for the previous question and tellers reported 136 in the affirmative and one in negative.

During the voting Mr. Conger strolled himself close to the tellers with a slip of paper in his hand for the purpose, as he stated, of making note of such demoralized as voted notwithstanding the fact that they were paired. On the announcement of the vote, Mr. Banks said "I propose to the gentleman from New York (Potter) that we shall suspend on this resolution until Saturday, in order to go on with the appropriation bills."

Mr. Potter. Let me ask the gentleman from Michigan to state what he will do as he proposes, and go on with the other business, his side of the house will be prepared to vote on this question when it comes up on Saturday.

Mr. Banks. I am unable to answer that question. I make this proposal on my own authority, because the country requires that the public business should be attended to.

Mr. Potter. Will you help us to make up the quorum?

Republican Call.

HEADQUARTERS REPUBLICAN STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF COLORADO.

DENVER, MAY 11, 1878.

The republican state central committee of Colorado will meet at their rooms in Denver on Wednesday, June 12, 1878.

It is expected that the members of the committee will be prepared to present at that time complete reports as to the condition and organization of the party in their respective counties.

An invitation is hereby extended to all members of the party throughout the state to meet with the committee for a general exchange of views. It is important that all portions of the state be represented, that their interests may be fully understood and arrangements made for the prosecution of a vigorous and successful campaign.

W. H. Price, Chairman.
T. Clark, secretary.

TRUTH.

Mr George Campbell, M. P., contributed a very interesting article to the "Daily Post," recently, on the subject of the resettlement of the Turkish dominions. He has not looked at the question simply from a British standpoint, but in a broad statesmanlike manner with reference to the ethnological divisions and characteristics, and a proper adjustment of international relations.

The article opens with the significant utterance that England, at the opening of the war chose neutrality when "naturally meant that, so far as Russia went, through the Turks, and that great territorial changes must result." After saying that the Russian forces are "modestly" to be expected and that England can do little to modify them, he enters into the discussion of the re-settlement of the Turkish territories under the three heads—Constantinople and the straits, Europe, and Asia.

In regard to the first question, Mr. Campbell is of the opinion that nothing should be done. Though he thinks that if the Turks would retire into Asia they would become a stronger nation. The possession of Constantinople will subject them to Europe in jealousy and complications, and to the corrupt rule of the pashas. As long as Russia is a third rate naval power, and so crippled financially that she cannot build a navy, there is no great danger to British interests in that quarter.

In respect to the settlement of European Turkey, Mr. Campbell thinks that there is more danger that Russia will not do enough for the Christian inhabitants of Turkey than too much.

Bulgaria should have the insurrections given to it and govern itself. Servia should have additions in what is known as old Servia, as far as the ethnical character of the population would allow. Servia should be united to Servia, but owing to the large Mahommedan population, it would cause great trouble. On this account it is thought that Austria could better take the government of Bosnia into her own hands.

He favors forming Epirus, Thessaly, Macedonia, Albania and the inlands, into a Greek confederacy, but as Russia has not insisted on this, it cannot at present be accomplished. Roumania should have Dobruclia. In regard to the fear that the Slav states formed in the southwestern part of Europe will be under Russian influence, and hence give to Russia undue predominance in that part of Europe, Mr. George Campbell says that it is groundless. He draws attention to the fact that the Slavs represent popular institutions and are democratic. He says, "If we are jealous of Russian despotism, we should promote, not restrict the freedom and territorial extension of the democratic south Slavs."

The above changes would unite the people of the same race, and give them a government of their own. It would make several strong and vigorous nations who would be likely to be a barrier to any ambitious designs to Russia in that direction.

In regard to the resettlement of the Asiatic Turkey, it is thought that the Turks should then have the opportunity of forming a strong independent government.

Considering the natural resources of the country, Turkey could become a stronger power there, without the European possessions, as she would be more compact. European powers should assist Turkey in ousting imperial control over Asiatic and African countries now subject to them.

England would not be benefited in having possession of Egypt, as Egypt is bankrupt, and various European complications would arise. A strong Turkish power in the western part of Asia would prevent Russia from taking sole possession of the overland route to India, and thus endanger peaceful traffic. Turkey would also be well situed from a maritime point of view, for if the Russians should obtain control of the Black Sea, Turkey will be accessible to other powers from the Aegean and Mediterranean Seas and also the Persian gulf.

If the English government would approach this question with the broad views of national policy, and the spirit of justice and conciliation which characterized this article we have given such an incomplete notice of, we are sure British interests would be subserved, as well as the general welfare of Europe.

Pennsylvania Republican Convention.

The result of the deliberations of the republican state convention of Pennsylvania will be a great disappointment to many who expected that the convention would not be run by the "machine." The Cameron ring had full sway. The better elements of the republican party supported Galusha A. Grow, and John F. Wickesham as candidates for governor. Mr. Grow had been speaker of the house of representatives and had a national reputation. His known probity of character and eminent ability would have strengthened the republican ticket throughout the country. Instead of Mr. Grow the convention has chosen General Hoyt as their standard bearer. General Hoyt is a man of local reputation only, ordinary ability and closely identified with the worst political elements. The democratic party can hardly do worse.

The platform is well suited for such a man to stand on. It is more distinguished for what it fails to affirm than for what it really affirms. It has not one word in favor of economy and purity of government; it completely ignores the present administration; it has no denunciation for the pernicious principles of the "national greenback labor party"; it is wholly silent on the great question of finance; there is not even a word in favor of resumption of honest money. In fact the only question of any importance whatever referred to in the platform is the tariff question.

This question will be prominent for a few years, and unless the New England and middle states favor a revision of the tariff laws, they will be more strongly opposed by the south and west than they were on the silver question, because the south and west have a really good and just cause for their opposition in this case. This question, more than any other, will be apt to divide our country into sections. The great north will produce effects, and is not only, not in the least benefited by our present tariff, but is obliged to pay heavy tribute to the eastern manufacturers. The south also is not benefited by our present tariff, but is also obliged to support up taxes that never should have been levied. The consumers of this country have rights as well as the producers. The party in Pennsylvania has chosen to ignore the present administration. We are sure that President Hayes can stand this, but we are not sure that the republican party can afford to do this. His administration has been identified with purity, economy and honesty. It is not an unfair inference to draw from a failure to endorse the present administration that the party in Pennsylvania are not in sympathy with the reform measures.

The republican party does not start out auspiciously. Such a platform and such a candidate cannot draw the independent voter. However, we can trust that the democratic party to make bigger blunders, and then the republican party will have some show of success.

The state central democratic committee met at Denver Wednesday. They determined on holding the state convention on the 17th of July. During their deliberations they adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the new state central committee of Colorado endorse the resolutions introduced in the house of representatives by Hon. Clarkson N. Potter, of New York, in relation to the trade committed to the state presidential election, and urge upon that body their adoption.

Patterson should have been present to second the resolution. We do most earnestly hope that the democracy will make this an issue in the coming campaign. Mr. Loveland is considered the leading candidate for governor, Mr. Otero for congress, and Mr. Alva Adams for lieutenant governor.

In regard to the president's resigning, the Springfield Republican expresses itself as follows: "There is nothing for Mr. Hayes as a patriotic man to do except to serve out his term. He is not responsible for any frauds that were committed in his election; he is not responsible for being president during the four years for which he was declared elected. He could not surrender the office to Mr. Tilden if he would, and the country would not let him if he could."

Bret Harte has at last obtained an office. He first applied for the Swiss mission, then for the Chinese mission, and finally said he would be satisfied with the consul generalship at Paris. But somehow the administration did not seem to appreciate him. Finally he asked for any position abroad which was vacant, and he was appointed consul at Crefeld, Germany, with a salary of $5,000.

Lord Lytton, governor of India, says he could send 140,000 native troops to help England in case of war.

Humorous.

Some of the French jokes connected with the Russo-Turkish war are not bad, these, for example:

A Russian general rides forward to the Grand Duke. "I have the honor, your Imperial Highness to announce a great victory."

"Very well, go and congratulate your troops."

"There is none left."

Another: A Turkish pasha is surveying the field with his glass. An ail-de-camp rides up.

"All our artillery has been captured."

The Pasha scratches his beard philosophically, and says, "Fortunately it was not paid for."

Editor's Note: Harper's Magazine for June.

"My man," said an English lawyer to a witness, "tell us now exactly what passed."

"Yes, My lord, I said I would not have the pig."

"And what was his answer?"

"He said that he had been keeping it for me, and that he—"

"No, no, he could not have said that, he spoke in the first person."

"No, my lord; I was the first person that spoke."

"I mean, don't bring in the third person; repeat his exact words."

"There was no third person, my lord, only him and me."

"My good fellow, he did not say he had been keeping the pig; he said I have been keeping it."

"I assure you, my lord, there was no mention of your lordship at all."

"We are on different stories. There was no third person there, and if anything had been said about your lordship I must have heard it."

The lawyer gave in.

A few days ago a lawyer of this city filed a petition in the district court, in which the plaintiff is an old Mexican woman. The district court, as usual, wanted security for costs.

Said the lawyer: "She is not required to give a cost bond. She is a pauper, and will make an affidavit to that effect."

"Why, she died in a naval estate, and served the clerks."

"I know she has got nothing now," retorted the lawyer.

"Have you collected your fee in advance?"

"You bet I did."

"It's all right, then. I am satisfied she is a pauper now," sighed the clerk. San Antonio Express.

That was a happy response of General Grant's when at Jerusalem. A committee of citizens came out to meet him and to render him a public reception. He replied, "Not in sight of the Mount of Olives." In the incident recall the remark of Douglas Jerrold, who, when told by a red republican in Paris that l'Or de Blanc was next to Christ, haively asked, "Which side?" Editor's Note: Harper's Magazine for June.

A teacher in Bangor upbraided a little girl because she did not hold up her hands with the rest of the delinquents when, at the close of the day, all those who had lost their places in their classes were called upon to do so. But with ready wit she responded, "Please, m'm, I didn't lose my place; an' how could I when I'm at the foot?"

A lady with a fatal squint came once to a fashionable artist for her portrait. He looked at her, and she looked at him, and both were embarrassed. He spoke first.

"Would your ladyship permit me," he said, "to take the portrait in profile?"

There is a certain shyness about one of your ladyship's eyes which is as difficult in art as it is fascinating in nature.

"Just after the war, when it was mighty hard getting along for the deluded bairns, I served dat wenchher I prayed de Lord to sen' one ob Marse Peyton's fat turkeys to de old man; de old man was no notis-tak ob that partition; but when I prayed dat He would send de old man to de turkey, de master was tended t' befo' sum up de next morning for sartin."

Mistress [who does not allow "tollwytters" in the house]. "Who is that you were talking to in the kitchen, Mary?" Mary, making a clean breast of it, "Well, you see, m'm, me an' my young man have started a typewriter in sum, but he never comes nearer than round the quid or the next street, m'm."

Having heard that Murphy was curing the trout of drunkenness, a venerable lady from the old sod was recently heard to remark: "Sure an' I've heard tell in Skibbereen that the bite of a covid Murphy was a good thing to take away the taste av it."

A green sportsman, after a fruitless tramp, met a boy with tears in his eyes and said: "I say, youngster, is there anything to shoot around here?" The boy answered:

"Nothin' just 'bout here, but there's the schoolmaster 'tutha side the hill, y' wish you'd shoot him."

First Law Pill "Jones, a most curious question has arisen lately. There's a man in Newton, and the law's such that they can't bury him." Second Law Pill (earnestly) "Very abounding, to be sure!" Why, how on earth can that be?" First Law Pill (derisively) "Why, he isn't dead yet!"

"Mamma, did they used to have carriages in Jerusalem?" asked a very little English boy just from "Sunday school." "I don't know, dear, why?" "Because I heard the minister talking to-day about the Hacks of the Apostles."

Seeking information of a German friend, we asked him: "My friend, how long have you been married?" "Vell, dis is a tig dat I seldom don't like to talk about, but ven I does, it seems so long as it never vas."

A Frenchman just back from a trip to Havre: "You will never catch me traveling by an excursion train again." My Sir, at the station at Havre I lost my cane and my wife." Then, with his intarance choking with tears, "A new cane, too."

Yes, brother journalists, there will come a time when religious societies will not expect seven dollars' worth of gratuitous advertising in return for a ticket entitling the bearer to a chance in a raffle for a ninety-nine-cent hair brush. Abbaye, frères.

"Aunty, is an old maid a girl that has been made a long time?" Aunty (who is not in the spring time) "Time for bed, Johny."

A great many of us are in the condition of the nigrô in the familiar song:

"I've left home in my brother's eye, Can't see de beam in mine."

ADIRONDACK TROUT.

The Wonderful Performance of One Which a Literary Man Caught.

Mr. Charles Dudley Warner thus relates in the Atlantic Monthly, how he caught an Adirondack trout:

"At the very first cast I saw that the hour had come. Three trout leaped into the air. The danger of this maneuver all astherman understand; it's one of the commonest in the woods; three heavy trout take hold at once, rushing in different directions, smash the tackle into splinters. I evaded this catch, and threw again. I recall the moment. A hermit thrush on the tip of a balsam uttered his long, liquid evening note. Happening to look over my shoulder, I saw the peak of Marty glimmering in the sky (I can't help it that Marty is fifty miles off, and cannot be seen from this region); these incidental touches are always used. The hundred feet of silk swished through the air, and the tail fly fell as lightly on the water as a three-cent piece (which no 'stamming will give the weight of a ten) drops upon the contribution plate. Instantly there was a swirl, a swirl, I struck, and 'Got him in,'

"Never mind what Luke said I got him by." "Out on the fly," continued the irretrievable guide, but I told him to back water and make for the center of the lake. The trout, as soon as he felt the prick of the hook, was off like a shot, and took out the whole of the line with a rapidity that made it snap.

"Give him the butt," shouted Luke. "It is the usual remark in such an emergency to give him the butt, and recognizing the fact and my spirit, the trout at once sunk to the bottom and suffocated. It is the most dangerous mood of a trout, for you cannot tell what he will do next. We reeled up a little, and wasted five minutes for him to reflect. A tightening of the line encouraged him, and he soon developed his tactics. Coming to the surface, he made for the boat faster than I could reel in, and evidently with hostile intentions. 'Look out for him,' cried Luke, as he came flying in the air. He evaded him by dropping flat in the bottom of the boat, and when I picked my trap up he was spinning across the lake as if he had a new idea, but the line was still fast. He did not run far."

"I gave him the butt again, a thing he seemed to hate, even as a gift, in a moment the evil-minded fish, lashing the water in his rage, was coming back again, making straight for the boat as before. Luke, who was used to such encounters, having read of them in the writings of travelers he had accompanied, raised his paddle in self defense. The trout left the water about ten feet from the boat and came directly at me, with fiery eyes, his speckled sides flashing like a meteor. I dodged as he whirled by with a vicious snap of his bifurcated tail, and nearly upset the boat. The line was now completely cut, and the danger was that he would entangle me about it and carry away a leg. This was evidently his game, but I unglad it, and only had a free-st batton or two by the swiftly moving string. The trout plunged into the water with a hissing sound, and went a joy again with all the line on the reel. More bats. More indignation on the part of the captive."

The contest had now been going on for half an hour, and I was getting fatigued. We went back and forth across the lake, and round and round the lake; what I feared was that the trout would snap up the butt and stick it in the bushes. But by a havency, a gentle effort of a maneuver which I had never read of. Instead of coming straight toward me, he took a long circle, swimming rapidly, and gradually contracting his orbit. I recited 'em, and kept my eye on him. Round and round he went, narrowing his circle. I began to suspect the game, which was to twist my best off. When he had reduced the radius of his circle to about twenty-five feet, he struck a tremendous pace through the water. It would be false modesty in a sportsman to say that I was not equal to the occasion. Instead of turning round with him as he expected, I stepped to the bow, braced myself, and let the boat swing. Round went the fish, and round we went like a top. I saw a line of Marse Marcy's all round the horizon. The rosy tint in the west made a broad bank of pink along the sky above the tree tops. The evening star was a bright circle of light, a hoop of gold in the heavens. We roled, and whirled, and receded, and recited, and whirled. I was willing to give the malicious beast butt and line and all, if he would only go the other way for a change.

When I came to myself Luke was gaffing the trout at the boat-side. After we got him in and dressed him we weighed three-quarters of a pound.

An Indian Song.

There is a beautiful little song in the Chippewa language which is full of pathos and rhyme, and which the little children sing and play in the evening. A traveler thus describes it: "One evening while in the Chippewa village I was attracted by shouts of merriment from childish voices, and I walked out to the green lawn skirting the edge of the river to get a full view of the players and hear their songs. A group of children were at play gamboling and chasing the fire-flies, millions of which little insects filled the air, making the plain literally sparkle with phosphorescent light. The following are the words which they addressed to the insect:

"Wau wau tay see!
Wau wau tay see!
E now e shin
Tsoh bwau ne baun e wee
Bee eghau be eghau e wee
Wa wan tay see
Wa wan tay see
Was sa koon an je gun
Was sa koon an je gun."

Literally translated, they would read:

"Flitting white firefly,
Flitting white firefly,
Give me light to go to bed,
Give me light to go to sleep.
Or, by a slight transposition of the words in the original language, Mr. Goodrich has made them read, when rendered in free translation:

"Firefly! firefly! bright little thing,
Light me to bed while my song I sing;
Give me your light as you fly over my head,
That I may merrily go to bed;
Give me your light over the grass as you creep,
That I may joyfully go to sleep.

Come, little firefly, come, little beast,
Come, and I'll make you tomorrow a feast;
Come, little candle, that flies as I sing;
Bright little fairy bug, night's little king;
Come, and I'll dance as you guide me along;
Come, and I'll pay you, my bug, with a song.

ONLY TO THE DESTITUTE.

The reputation this house bears for strict honesty and attention to business is such as to challenge the admiration of all who favor them with their patronage, while their facilities for doing business in a satisfactory manner are unsurpassed by any firm west of the Mississippi. It is a common remark that

E. LEONARD & CO.

Are among the leading clothiers of the state, and that their prices are always so reasonable that persons once trading with them think of going no where else.

Their success is due in a great measure to the points above noted; but another fact should also be mentioned in this communication, to wit: They purchase their goods by the car-load, pay cash, and get the best to gain to be had in the great cities in the state. Besides, their agents are always on the look out for special red-bottoms, &c., and they are always prepared to take advantage of the same.

Their daily practice is to sell

So low that customers can pay for them, and thus retain their own self-respect.

Owing to the immense stock they have just received and that is yet to come, this firm has found it necessary to greatly enlarge their quarters, and to this end have secured the rooms above their own and the adjoining stores.

RISKS.

Any person living within an area of one hundred miles from Colorado Springs runs a risk if he buys his ready-made clothing at any other house than that of

E. LEONARD & CO.

Never in their past history was this Old Reliable Firm so well prepared to supply all the demands of the people for new, neat, and elegant spring and summer suits. Every department is replete with all the novelties of the season, and at prices never before known in the annals of the clothing trade in this city.

They make no misrepresentations. Never were they better prepared to prove the truth of this contention than at present.

THE COLORADO SPRINGS GAZETTE

MAY 17, 1878.

Official Paper of the City of Colorado Springs.

"Old prob" reported from Pike's Peak last night that the weather to-day would be foul.

Sagendorf & Taylor have greatly improved the appearance of their store by the addition of new shelf bottles.

May of Stiles of Denver was married to Miss Sarah Woodward, also of that city, on Wednesday evening last.

L. Leonard & Co. show their enterprise by the way they buy their goods. On Wednesday last they received a car load of trunks and valises, numbering over 200 pieces.

In the case of Joel Magee against L. C. Daga, for false imprisonment, Judge Colburn rendered his decision yesterday morning. The plaintiff was allowed one dollar for damages.

Rev. J. A. Stayt and wife, Mrs. M. J. Weldian, and E. T. Harrisson made the ascent of Pike's Peak yesterday. The ladies remained at the Lake House, while the gentlemen went on to the Summit. A telegram received at 6 o'clock stated that they had arrived in good condition.

The First National bank is undergoing a course of repairs and improvements. The walls have been newly papered with fine fresco paper, and a new floor composed of alternate strips of black walnut and ash is being put down, which will be, when completed, a little ahead of anything in that line in the city.

The Colorado Springs hotel was opened to-day. A large number of the leading citizens of the city were at dinner by invitation. The dinner was an elegant affair, and highly appreciated by the guests. The hotel, as we have stated before, has been thoroughly renovated. The walls have been papered, the ceiling kalsomined, the wood-work repainted, and the rooms refurnished. There is room in the hotel for about 60 guests. With the old reliable Crawford, and our two new hotels, Colorado Springs will be able to furnish first-class accommodations to her guests this summer. Mr. Atherton, the proprietor of the Colorado Springs hotel, has had a wide experience in the business and we are well pleased with his good success.

Fine Hotels.

A reporter of the GAZETTE visited the stables of Messrs. Cook & Shepherd, on Cuchara street yesterday, and was there shown some of the finest blood horses to be found in Colorado. Principal among them was the three-year-old stallion, "Posey Wilson," who was sired by "Viscount," half brother to "Goldsmith's Maid," by "Alexander's Abdallah," dairied by "Abdallah, Jr." and sired by "Alexander's Abdallah." Also, "Lady Vick," (by "New York,") who won the forty-dollar purse at Denver last June. She has a record of 2-45. They are also the owners of the gelding, "Sparkle," who has a record of 2-40.

Planned.

Sheriff Becker went up to Denver yesterday.

Guy W. Butler, a ranchman of long experience, is stopping at the Crawford.

In response to a telegram announcing the severe illness of his father, Mr. L. H. Bartlett left yesterday for his home in Maine.

Charles L. Spencer, a banker of Toledo, Ohio, with his wife and family, is stopping at the Crawford.

R. J. Shapley, of the Toledo, Wabash and Western Ry. is at the Crawford.

G. Z. Work, of the firm of Work, Pack & Co., batters, of Chicago, is at the Crawford.

J. Clark, of the P. Ft. W. & C. R. R., is registered at the Crawford.

Mr. N. H. Kuhl and family left the city yesterday for St. Louis.

W. W. Borst, general superintendent of the D. & R. G. Railway, is stopping at the Colorado Springs Hotel.

House It.

Robinson's museum and the floor decoration of our First National bank, are receiving many visitors.

David McShane was in town yesterday. His name is being mentioned in democratic circles in connection with the office of governor of the state.

The Mountainer is being delivered to subscribers by a carrier having but one sound leg, which brought away its master from the railway war.

Money is plenty at Colorado Springs, and may be contrasted with a reasonable exhibition of want.

Westerfield, our undertaker, puts an "L" on his coffin for the convenience of the legs and feet, of those persons from Kansas who are at great length.

Several of our citizens, by reputation, are endeavoring to familiarize themselves with that ancient saying, "The democrats are in power."

The town authorities of Manitou have under consideration the white-washing of Pike's Peak, with other attractive mountain embellishments.

The lookout man on Pike's Peak reports "distant indications of a renewal of the Russian and Anglo-Turkish war."

Our military company have scattered out into the country, and will remain there until the lambing season is over.

The tenderfooted tramp is here, with a prospect of his remaining as long as he can purchase two cans of oysters and a grab of soda crackers at Craigie's for a quarter.

Besser throws in a pinch of pepper and salt extra, and True & Sutton a spoon to stir the mixture when eating on the sidewalk.

A great crowd of ladies and gentlemen were seen yesterday, moving in and out of the National hotel, where the landlord had placed an exhibition of carpet-sack on Benj. Butler, which the general had forwarded in advance of his arrival next week.

The excursion to Alamosa will be the commencement of the grand fashionable season at Colorado Springs.

Dr. Reynolds is packing up his mallets, bats, and croquet grounds to take with him.

The democratic state convention will meet at Manitou, the prohibitory character of our city ordinances making it a penal offense for gatherings of that kind in our city. We understand that our soda fountains have petitioned the city fathers to suspend the operation of the ordinance and close our Tabernacle temple of Janus during the meeting of the convention and thus prevail upon them to come here. It is believed that the city council will do it in the usual manner by winking all round.

It is said that Lucy Stone is packing her carpet-sack for our fall campaign, and the Chapman is getting ready for her, having contracted for a new double-acting steam power press.

Yesterday one of our prominent citizens, in an off-spoken manner, observed upon the public street, in the presence of a crowd, "We ought to have a broad-gauge road from River Bend to Leadville by way of the C. & R. Ry." He had hardly given utterance to these words when the city marshal laid his hand upon his shoulder.

threw open his buttoned coat, and exhibited his jewelry, at the sight of which the speaker and the crowd immediately subsided.

Our city never presented a more pleasing and attractive appearance than it does now. Nature seems determined to lure us upward to higher considerations than the sweepings of a pump-handle, or the wiggles of a gold fish.

Blind Tom will look in upon us Saturday evening. It is a great pity that he can't play the fiddle; it would enable the audience to mark time with their feet. What can be more pleasing and enjoyable than the shrill melody which fills the measure of the ear when the violin pours forth? The Campbells are coming. "Sugar in the ground." "Dolly came to our house, and who the king but Charley."

A Mexican entered the county clerk's office this morning and after crying the clerk, Mr. Howbert, for a time, thinking that he was waiting for a customer, laid down a quarter upon the counter saying, "Me whisky hungry, give me some two bits." What followed was closely observed by the city marshal, and John Potter, our postmaster, who was looking on has been subpoenaed as a witness. "MUGGLE."

Musical Local.

From dawning-morn till dewy eve, and away into the night, they are busy at the Mammoth Factor Store of S. Sesser's, putting up goods, and why not, when the captain is lighting all the while to-ge-er.

It goods could have been sold cheaper why don't you do it before I come? Don't cry because all the trade goes to the Mammoth Factor Store & Co. dearly.
